THE BARRE DAILY TIMES

FRIDAY, MARCH 18, 1910.

Entered at the post office at Barre as second-class matter.

Published every week-day afternoon. Subscriptions: One year, $3.00; one month, 25 cents; single copy, 1 cent. Frank E. Langley, Publisher.

The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

"On the streets of Cairo." We trust Theodore was circumspect.

Weston is eight days ahead of his schedule. Come on, old man!

A painful reminder of duty—the death of a college foot ball player in Texas, several months after being injured.

President Taft finally admits that newspapers are a necessity and that there are some good ones. Tardy, but better.

We couldn't imagine former Vice President Fairbanks bringing anything but a message of peace. He is a benediction in himself.

A movement has been started in New Hampshire to preserve the Daniel Webster birthplace. How about the "constitution house" in Windsor, Vt.? Is it to be allowed to fall away into decay?

"We are situated about midway between Barre and Hardwick," says the advertisement of the new St. Albans granary in the current issue of a trade journal. The geography of good old Vermont must be sadly warped in that case.

When the Rutland county court jurors brought in a "third degree" murder verdict against Eddy, they must have become confused by the grilling process, which they had just undergone in passing upon a man's life. If jurymen's work in murder cases is not "third degree" hardship, then nothing is.

In a modest sort of a way, ex-Gov. McCullough is becoming considerable of a philanthropist, having now offered $25,000 to Middlebury college on condition that $25,000 more is raised by commencement time. He is showing his loyalty to Vermont, even if it is his "summer home," as was somewhat slurpingly stated when McCullough was running for governor.

FAILURE TO APPOINT LICENSE COMMISSIONERS.

Whether or not the majority verdict of the voters of Rutland in favor of licensing the sale of liquor can be nullified now by the failure of the assistant judges of the county to appoint license commissioners for the city is a rather perplexing problem just now. There is no doubt in the minds of the people, apparently, that the assistant judges made an effort to get together on satisfactory persons for the place, but nevertheless they failed within the sixteen days prescribed by the law, in which

Small Accounts

Starting a small account with us now and gradually adding to it is better than waiting until you have a large sum to deposit. You are making sure of the small amounts and four per cent interest is adding to the total all the while. If you have no money in the bank, this is a good time to begin.

they shall appoint after the vote is taken. So there can be no reflection on their motives.

However, it is easy to conceive of a position in which assistant judges could suspect the edict of a sovereign majority by simply failing to appoint license commissioners within the certain specified time named in the law. Manifestly, there ought to be a remedy for such an intolerable condition; and Rutland will probably find a way out of the present difficulty.

VERMONT'S POSITION IN NATIONAL ADMINISTRATION.

We agree with the Montpelier Journal that Vermont has sent some notable men to Congress during the past half-century and is still sending some men who will measure up well with the average, probably above the average, of the personnel in the present Congress, as far as personal fitness for the place goes. That much we will readily grant. But unfortunately strength, as strength is measured nowadays, is not counted in excellence of individuals, but in votes. Therefore, Vermont is weak, lamentably weak, in the House of Representatives. There are only five states in the whole union that have less voting strength than Vermont, the states of Delaware, Idaho, Montana, Nevada and Arizona; and they have one each to Vermont's two. What can Vermont's two votes do against New York's 37, Pennsylvania's 32, the 25 of Illinois, the 21 of Ohio and so on down through a long list of states, which have a voting power several times that of the Green Mountain state? Vermont is so far outnumbered in Congress that its influence is negligible, and if the state of Vermont should, independently, attempt to discredit Speaker Cannon, it would be laughed out of countenance.

What Vermont can do is merely to join its voice with the rising current of protest against Cannon and bring its small reinforcements to the aid of a worthy cause. It is time to stop deluding ourselves into the belief that we are great; it is time to stop deluding ourselves with the perfectly true thought that Vermont has produced some great men. In short, it is time to be candid with ourselves and admit that while Vermont does send capable men to Congress the state is nevertheless but a drop in the bucket of the nation. This we say while yielding nothing to the Montpelier Journal in loyalty to Vermont, her men and her institutions.

Current Comment

Those Pittsford Raids.

If there really is any intoxicating liquor kept illegally at the Pittsford inn, someone must be pretty clever, or official determination doesn't count for much. One pint of whiskey, and that the property of the cook, isn't a great deal to show for three raids, and the three bottles also found may have been emptied by the same thirsty party.—Rutland Herald.

Might Not Agree.

The Monitor has no objection to L. I. Johnson of Randolph for lieutenant governor. In fact would like to see him elected, and under the guidance and careful protection of Gov. Mead, the succession of lieutenant-governors might be continued. But present indications would tend to show that our Rutland and Randolph friends would not be as David and Jonathan.—Barton Monitor.

A Vermont Protest.

Evidently the Times does not have a very high opinion of the importance and influence of its own state. Influence is not always determined by square miles or census tabulations of population. For many years little feeble Vermont had more real influence in Congress, aside from the actual casting of votes than the great and populous empire state. Since the election of Elihu Root to the Senate, the strength of New York in Congress has been increased in a notable manner, but during the last half century the real influence of Vermont in the national legislation will not suffer when compared with New York, Pennsylvania or any of the "big" states of the American Union.

To go no farther back than 1896 the action of this state, in declaring for William McKinley, exerted a powerful influence in turning the tide toward the candidacy of the Ohio man for the presidency.

If Speaker Cannon disciplines Congressman Foster because the latter has been courageous enough to say what the great majority of the members of his party think, Vermont Republicans may not consider it advisable to express their indignation in a plank in the platform to be adopted at the state convention this year. Our convention will be one of the first to be held in 1910 and if a plank should be adopted condemning Cannon and Canningism, it would be a voice of protest that would be heard a long way beyond Washington. In the present state of public opinion, such is the popular hostility to the speaker, a Vermont protest against his methods might easily be like a spark in a powder magazine. Rest assured, Speaker Cannon will not ignore public opinion in Vermont or laugh at it.

The Journal prefers to advertise the strength rather than the feebleness of Vermont, and can follow such a policy without doing violence to the truth.—Montpelier Journal.

A Good Example.

Our neighbors in Swanton, who celebrated the rejuvenation of their board of trade a few nights ago, by one of the most enjoyable banquets and "getting together" meeting ever held in the county, have set St. Albans an example by enrolling some of the farmers on the outskirts of the village as members of the organization.

And why shouldn't they be? The farmers about St. Albans are, or ought to be, well nigh as much interested in the prosperity and growth of St. Albans as we that live here. It is their city, too, their trading center, their one nearest place of general resort for social and other purposes. And all that helps St. Albans to grow and prosper, makes a better home market for those farmers and enhances the value of their farm property. On the other hand St. Albans should be equally interested in all that makes for the betterment of the condition of the farmers, because, apart from any higher motive, a large part of the natural resources and the prosperity of this city depend upon the farming country roundabout. Everything that St. Albans can do to stimulate better dairying methods and more intensive and specialized farming among these farmers, every facility that her business men and banks can properly extend to those farmers, will come back to St. Albans many fold, in good will, money, and everything else that makes life worth living.

There is plenty of room for both Swanton and St. Albans to grow and flourish side by side. But St. Albans should follow the example of Swanton and begin to interest the farmers in her board of trade.—St. Albans Messenger.

Jingles and Jests

Cactus Center's Slogan.

We feel that Cactus Center is the Southwest's natural hub. So we organized for boostin' a Young Men's Commercial club. Our leadin' gamblers joined it, and the barkeepers done the same. And the women came a-runnin' fer to help the boostin' game.

We was all enthusiastic when we met to launch the thing. And the talk was mild and gentle, with no controversy's sting. Till some krote said 'twas needful, and he volunteered the slogan fer to catch the public ear.

The suggestions come a-pourin' from all quarters of the hall, Such as "Cactus Center's Cackles," and "Hear Cactus Center's Call"; And some yelled one suggestion, and some suggested for a vote. And the chairman jumped the meetin' with a bullet through his coat.

So we've left the matter standin' in a sort of status quo. Which is what the ancients called it, when the wheels refused to go. We are back to simpler problems, such as evil humors and their powers. And we'll leave the slogan question to more peaceful burps than ours.—Denver Republican.

Spring Thought of Hobo.

In the spring the hobo's fancy strongly turns to thoughts of grub; How to get it without working; That's the question, there's the rub!—Judge.

AMUSEMENT NOTES.

Brand New Attraction in "The Girl from U. S. A." Saturday.

A brand new attraction, of a type all its own, is making a strong appeal to playgoers this season, under the catchy title, "The Girl from U. S. A." It is a musical comedy drama of melodramatic tinge in which a vivacious American girl figures prominently in scenes laid in Paris, Constantinople and China. She and her Chicago husband, that is to be, strike a merry and strenuous gait in righting the wrongs of a pair of ill-fated Parisian lovers and make the power of the American flag felt in Turkish seraglio and Chinese palace. The new piece, which comes highly commended by the press of other cities, will be seen at the opera house Saturday afternoon and evening. A talented company of singers and actors, assisted by a beautifully costumed chorus of finishing voices are promised in the performance here.
